The Creative Tourism...

Definition:

Creative Tourism is a sector in full expansion that gathers more and more followers in the world eager to discover the culture of their destination by participating in artistic and creative activities with its inhabitants.

... Painting in Tuscany, participating in a craft workshop in the Caribbean, being a “Silletero” in Medellin, blowing their own glass in the French Provence, weaving their own Panama hat in Ecuador, learning traditional Gaucha dances in Porto Alegre (Brazil), a cooking class in Bangkok or Tokyo, participating in a DJ workshop in Ibiza or even to perform their own concert in the Sagrada Familia in Barcelona, as well as many more... are some of the many activities sought by this new generation of travelers and promoted by the Creative Tourism Network®.

This concept appeared in the 2000’s, as a result of the research work of Professors Greg Richards and Crispin Raymond, who defined it as:

Tourism which offers visitors the opportunity to develop their creative potential through active participation in courses and learning experiences, which are characteristic of the holiday destination where they are taken.’

Crispin Raymond and Greg Richards (2000).

The Creative Tourism’s assets:

Beyond a simple tourist offer, creative tourism has become a tool for territorial development. It contributes to create a CHAIN OF VALUE and so:

- Diversification of the offers without any investment, just by putting the human and intangible heritage at the core of the tourism model.
- Intangible heritage recovery: preservation and promotion
- Emergence of new tourist destinations.
- Quality tourism endowed with a high added value and purchasing power.
- Unseasonality, as the creative tourists avoid the high season.
- The geographical balance (vs. overtourism) as creative tourists avoid tourist hotspots.
- Communities’ empowerment and positive effect on the locals’ self-confidence, given to this new interest for their culture & traditions.
- New governance and resilience tools.
- Sustainability as it uses the creativity as the mean resource.
- Promote social cohesion among local people and in their relationship with tourists.
Who are the creative tourists?

It is difficult to draw a portrait of the new tourists as they want to be “unique”.

- They can be singles, couples, families or a group of travelers.
- They can plan their trip themselves or contract professional services.
- The nature of their creative activities can be educational (courses, workshops), can refer to the creation (art residency, co-creation with local artists) or the representation (performing concert, acting, exhibiting).

We could thus present an infinite number of examples, such as a married couple who go to Tuscany to paint its incredible landscapes, a traveller who approaches the indigenous Mayan culture by participating in a weaving workshop in Guatemala, or a North American university orchestra that rents a prestigious auditorium in Barcelona to give a concert and invite the Barcelona public. ... And so on and so forth.

Common points of the Creative Tourists:

- They share the same values based on ethical principles, authenticity, intangibles, know-how, permanent training, experiences and DIY trends.
- They want to experience the local culture by participating actively in artistic and creative activities.
- They want to live experiences whereby they can feel themselves “like a local”.
- They spend a substantial part of the budget for the fulfillment of these experiences.
- They combine different types of tourism, during the same trip.
- They are exclusive regarding the way they travel: once experienced the creative tourism, they no longer want to come back to a conventional circuit.

Interview with Caroline Couret, founder of the Creative Tourism Network®

Have you ever heard of “creative tourism”? It deals with an increasing trend in which tourists travel around the world to discover little known aspects of a destination or culture, by participating in creative activities with the locals. This concept emerged in the early 2000s, from the research work of Professors Greg Richards and Crispin Raymond and is now adapted in a very wide array of contexts. In order to know further about this new generation of tourism, we met Caroline Couret, founder of the Creative Tourism Network®.
